The Water Cycle

All living things need water. Plants need water to grow. People and animals need water to drink.

Water is all around us. The clouds are made of water. When it rains, the water flows into rivers, lakes, and oceans. Some of that water evaporates into the air. It turns into vapor or steam that forms clouds. Then it rains again. The journey that water takes is called the water cycle.

1. What is the main idea of the first paragraph?

2. What does the word evaporate mean?
   a) To flow into rivers, lakes, and oceans.
   b) To turn into vapor or steam.
   c) To rain down.

What is an Immigrant?

An immigrant is a person who moves away from his or her own country to live in a new country. In America, there are immigrants from many different countries. Most of the people who live in America come from families that were immigrants or are immigrants themselves.

Some people who live in America do not come from families that were immigrants. Most African Americans were not immigrants because their ancestors were brought to America as slaves. They were forced to come to America and did not have rights or freedom. Native Americans are also not immigrants because they were living in America for thousands of years before other people came there.

Why the Wind Blows
You can't see the wind, but it is there! When air moves, it is called wind. If the air is moving fast, the wind will be strong. If it is moving slowly, it will be a gentle breeze.

Air moves because the sun makes some places warmer than other places. Warm air is lighter than cold air, so it rises. When the warm air rises, the heavier, cold air rushes to fill the space. The moving air makes wind. If there is a big difference in temperature between the warm and the cold air, the wind will be strong. It will be weaker if they are closer to the same temperature.

Fun Fact: Mount Everest is not only the highest place on Earth, it is also the windiest! That is because it is tall enough to reach the jet stream. The jet stream is a narrow band of strong wind flowing high in the sky.

1. What is wind?

2. What is the main idea of the second paragraph?

3. What is the jet stream?
   - a) a path in the sky for jet airplanes.
   - b) Wind that blows only on Mount Everest.
   - c) A strip of wind high above the Earth.

The Magic Paintbrush Retold
by Ellen L. Ramsey

1 As Liang drew in the dirt with a stick, an old woman stopped to look at his drawing. “It is so full of life,” she said.

2 Then she handed Liang a beautiful paintbrush. “This is for you,” she said, “but don’t misuse it. Paint only things you love for people you love.”

3 That afternoon, Liang painted a picture for his mother. He painted a round body, four little paws, a tail, and two pointed ears. He added bright eyes, a nose, a mouth, and whiskers. Then Liang fell asleep.

4 A soft meow woke him. To his surprise, a kitten had appeared!* * *

5 Each day, Liang painted for the people in his village. For an old man, Liang painted a horse to carry him to market. For a sad woman, he painted a big, colorful garden. Everyone talked of Liang’s wonderful paintings that came to life.

6 One day, the emperor sent for Liang. “Paint me a mountain of gold or I will lock you up,” said the emperor.

7 Liang thought of the old woman’s words: “Paint only things you love for people you love.” He shook his head.

8 The emperor’s guards took Liang’s paintbrush and locked him up.

9 Days later, Liang was brought before the emperor again. The emperor held the magic paintbrush. “If you paint me a mountain of gold, I will let you return to your mother,” he said.

10 Liang knew his mother needed his help. He took the paintbrush and painted a mountain of gold across a wide sea.

11 “That mountain is too far away!” the emperor roared.
“I cannot move a mountain,” Liang said, “but I will paint a ship to take you there.”

Liang painted a ship, and the emperor went aboard.

“Paint me wind to sail!” yelled the emperor.

Liang painted the wind.

The waves grew taller and stronger until the emperor’s ship overturned. He had to swim to shore and was stuck on his mountain of gold.

Then Liang painted himself wings and flew home to his mother.
